Farmers Organize To Protest Against Wheat Quota Taxes

650 From Stark, Columbiana, Other Counties Attend Canton Rally; Warned Of Charges On Other Crops

(By Associated Press.)

CANTON, July 9.—Plans to organize farmers or this area for a unified protest against the wheat marketing quota penalty tax were drafted at a meeting of 650 wheat growers at a mass meeting near here last night.

Edward E. Kennedy, vice president and Washington legislative agent of the National Farmers guild, told the meeting the protest either could be taken to the courts or carried to congress in an effort to eliminate the penalty of 49 cents a bushel on all wheat raised above the marketing quotas established in a nationwide vote May 31.

"This isn't just a fight against a single tax," Kennedy declared. "If the wheat penalty tax program is carried out without opposition, taxes will follow on every important crop or commodity produced on the farm."

"The time has come for action," he continued. "Either you must submit completely to the present program intended to control production or you must throw off the shackles and fight for the 'free American way' of farming."

Stark county farmers were asked to contribute to a fight fund in ratio to their excess wheat acreage. Farmers were present from Wayne, Medina, Richland, Columbiana, Erie, Carroll and Tuscarawas counties and steps were announced to organize these areas.

Kennedy said the protest movement is especially strong in Ohio, which voted less than 50 per cent for the marketing quotas.

U. S. Intervention Promised
(By Associated Press)
Columbus, July 9.—Federal intervention in a wave of protest against the government's new wheat marketing program was promised today while a state AAA official blanked lack of information for growing resentment against the quota system.

Agriculture officials told two Ohioans in Washington that field men would be sent into the state to make a complete survey of complaints and to confer personally with farmers who are objecting to the recently adopted system that imposes a penalty on wheat growers exceeding their quota.

Howard S. Harper, editor of the Washington Court House Record-Herald, and Roy Hagler, Fayette county farmer, obtained assurance of the inquiry after demanding that the government intervene.

They conferred with Undersecretary of Agriculture Paul Appleby and Lester R. Kennedy, acting director of the north central division of the AAA.

Both agreed, Harper said, that the problem in Ohio was serious and declared they were eager to settle it. Kennedy said that while the AAA intended to do everything possible to overcome the protests, the program could not be changed without modification of the law.

Harper will report on the results of his trip at a mass meeting of farmers in Washington Court House tomorrow.

STUDY PLANS FOR WRITE-IN TICKET

A number of Salem Democrats met last night at the Memorial building to map plans for the primary and general election campaign.

Officers elected are: Chairman, George McArthur; vice-chairman, William Reardon; secretary, Daniel W. Webber; treasurer, Vincent Judge.

Taking cognizance of the incomplete party ticket, the group discussed the possibilities of a write-in campaign at the primary election in August.

At another meeting to be held at the Memorial building next Monday night a complete ticket for the primary election is expected to be formulated.

REDS REPORT BIG VICTORY OVER ENEMY

Two Nazi Motorized Units Wiped Out, Claim, In White Russia

DRIVE STALLING, MOSCOW DECLARES

"Fights Continue Successful," Is Terse Comment From Germans

(By Associated Press)

Soviet armies reported a smashing victory over Adolf Hitler's invasion forces today in a battle in northern White Russia where two German motorized regiments were declared to have been wiped out and "the enemy left hundreds killed on the field and retreated to the west."

A Moscow war bulletin said fierce Russian resistance was stalling German drives along a 1,000-mile front from the Baltic to the Black sea. Far from executing a blitzkrieg, the bulletin said, the Nazis were trying to entrench in northern White Russia, on the upper Dvina river.

Hits U. S. in Iceland

On the diplomatic front, a German spokesman giving Germany's first official reaction to the landing of United States naval forces in Iceland asserted it was an active military step and that the United States was now represented by troops in the war zone.

"From a military point of view, these troops might as well be in a British port," the spokesman said. "Roosevelt for a long time had been approaching war and now has moved much closer to it."

Nazi sources implied clearly that Berlin was counting on the possibility the United States would occupy other places — such as the Azores, the Cape Verde islands, and Dakar, on the coast of French West Africa.

In London, Prime Minister Winston Churchill hailed Mr. Roosevelt's action as "one of the most important things that has happened since the war began."

Assist Each Other
Churchill said the British and United States navies would probably find it "mutually advantageous" to assist each other in the "very dangerous waters" around Iceland.

For the second successive day Hitler's high command reported the gigantic battles in Russia with a single sentence: "The fights continue successful on the entire eastern front."

The official German news agency said Nazi troops had scored major gains in the Baltic sector, with the capture of Parnu and Viilandi in southern Estonia, and Ostrov, on the main railroad line to Leningrad.

Salem Girl Scout Troops Are Set For Camping Trip

Beginning Monday, July 21, Girl Scout troops of the Salem council will take over their new camping quarters on the Rotary reservation about five miles north of the city.

For the first time since the Girl Scout movement was inaugurated here, the organization will have its own camp facilities.

Primary accommodations have been established, council executives announced today, and as time goes on other conveniences will be added so that the scope of the camping program may be extended.

A spacious shelter house is ready for occupancy, large enough to occupy one entire troop for all purposes in event bad weather should interfere with outdoor activities.

Four new tents have been purchased. Each has a wooden floor.

BLAKE TO STAY IN STATE POST

E. Liverpool Man Renamed To Ohio Industrial Commission

COLUMBUS, July 9.—Gov. John W. Bricker announced today the reappointment of Will T. Blake, East Liverpool Republican, to a six-year term as labor's representative on the state industrial commission.

In view of protests from eight officials of the Ohio Federation of Labor against Blake's reappointment, it was understood that the governor concluded their objections resulted from factional differences in the federation.

The AFL officials contended Blake was not sufficiently aggressive in behalf of workers who present claims for compensation to the commission.

Blake, a member of the federation, was named to the $5,000-a-year post in 1935 by Gov. Martin L. Davey to fill the unexpected term of the late William M. Morgan of Newark, a former congressman. Subsequently Davey appointed him for a full term.

The labor group opposing Blake's reappointment included four vice presidents of the state federation. They told the governor that Blake failed to win the endorsement of the state executive council.

The anti-Blake delegation included John Briedenbach of Dayton; Al Dalton, John Rohrich, William Finegan, Tom Lenthall, John Fitzgerald and Frank Converse, all of Cleveland, and Dale Stump of Columbus.

DELEGATES NAMED TO LEGION RALLIES

Delegates and alternates to the district and state American Legion conventions have been elected by Charles H. Carey post No. 56.

Named as delegates at a meeting Monday night are Commander Oscar Marietta and Milton Critchfield. Lee Holinger and Mrs. Pauline Tweedale were chosen as alternates.

The district convention will be held at Steubenville July 19 and 20. The state convention will be held in Youngstown Aug. 16, 17 and 18.

The Salem post is expected to have large delegations at both meetings.

The next meeting for the post will be the Columbiana county Legion council rally at Leoben Friday night.

WOUNDED BOY IS NEAR DEATH

Petersburg Lad, Shot By Poland Store Owner, In Hospital Here

Donald Wayne Dickson, 15, of Petersburg, lay near death in Salem City hospital today from gunshot wounds inflicted by a Poland hardware store employee about 3 this morning.

The youth was shot by James Johnston, Jr., son of James (Julian) Johnston, proprietor of the hardware store, after the men were aroused by a neighbor who heard a noise at the store.

According to Columbiana county and Mahoning deputy sheriffs, the neighbor, Robert Mumford, saw two men beside the store. Mumford said they were attempting to break a rock.

Mumford called the Johnstons who dressed hurriedly and went to the scene. The youths were reported to have started to run for their car, ignoring the Johnstons' commands to halt. The younger Johnston fired. Although one of the boys was believed at the time to have been hit, both got in their car and sped away.

Marshall Clark Wagner of Poland and Mahoning deputies were unable to locate the car, but at 4:30 a. m. Donald Dickson, together with his brother, David, 17, appeared at Salem City hospital. Donald had suffered severe wounds about the chest and left arm.

Patrolman Clifford Todd, who was called to the hospital, was informed by David Dickson that "some man" shot at them as they were investigating a prowler they had seen near the Petersburg creamery and whom they had trailed to Poland.

Police Chief Ralph Stoffer is holding a 22 calibre rifle which the boys had at the time.

CANTON, July 9.—Kenneth Bell, 17, of Minerva, was killed Tuesday night when the bicycle he was riding was struck by an auto near his home.

FARMERS LISTING MORE STORM LOSS

Curtis Walker, a farmer living on the Bunker Hill road, continued today to check damage done at his farm Monday afternoon during the storm which swept the district.

A wind funnel, which formed near the woods on the nearby W. R. Ovington farm, whirled toward Walker's farm, struck the barn and lifted the roof high into the air. Ovington, who was a witness, said there was a loud report like an explosion when the barn roof was torn loose. Parts of the roof were found several hundred yards away.

The same freak wind funnel knocked down all of Walker's shocked wheat and tore corn out by the roots at the Charles Bogar farm, east of the Walker property.

MONTH-LONG DRIVE ENDED BY ARMISTICE

United States Consulate At Beirut Serves As Intermediary

NO ANNOUNCEMENT MADE AS TO TERMS

Vichy Takes Steps To Avoid "Particularly Grievous Bloodshed"

VICHY, France, July 9.—The Vichy government announced tonight that it had asked Britain for an immediate armistice in the month-old war in Syria.

The United States consulate at Beirut was the intermediary in negotiations for a Vichy surrender which were started last night, a communiqué said.

It added that the French government has taken this step "to avoid particularly grievous bloodshed" in the conflict which was becoming daily more unequal.

Whether hostilities actually have ended was not disclosed immediately.

Terms Not Known
Neither was there any immediate indication of the terms to end the strife between the Vichy French and the invaders, the British, France's erstwhile allies against Germany, and the Free French for whom this was a fight of a brother against a brother.

The end of fighting had been foreshadowed in reports that an armistice was being arranged while the British-Free French allies, in possession of the Syrian capital of Damascus, closed relentlessly in on Beirut, on the Lebanese coast, and other centers of Vichy resistance at Aleppo and Homs.

(British Prime Minister Churchill informed the house of commons today that General Henri Dent, the French commander in Syria, had requested armistice terms but authoritative sources in London said at 9 p. m.—2 p. m., E. S. T.—they were without confirmation of the armistice conclusion.)

Model Ships To Fly At Miller Airport

One of the outstanding model airplane events of Ohio, the annual contest of the Flying Screwballs Model Airplane club, will take place at the Miller airport at North Benton on July 27.

This contest, which annually attracts from 300 to 500 contestants and 7,000 to 10,000 spectators from many states, features prizes worth $350 in cash, consisting of 15 motors, plus numerous kits, airwheels, propellers, and other accessories, to be given as awards to the winners of the first five places in the three events.

Either gas-powered planes, or those that run on rubber bands may be entered in the contest. The three events are: No. 1, gas models in class A or B; No. 2, gas models in class C; No. 3, rubber-powered models in all classes.

Time will be taken as the average of three flights. The contest will be run under A. M. A. rules. A. M. A. licenses are not required, however.

To facilitate retrieving of planes, a two-way radiophone communication system will be operated from a field station with portable units in cars. Motor trucks will be provided to chase and pick up the planes.

Contestants from any state may enter. Entry fees must either be mailed with an entry blank or presented upon registering at the field. Registration begins at 8 a. m. and ends at 4 p. m.

SOMETHING TO NIP IN THE BUD

Saddest thing about the war so far is the word "if." If certain things had been done—or hadn't been done—it wouldn't have started. If certain things had been done differently it wouldn't have lasted. And so on, ad infinitum, ad nauseam, and ad valorem.

Adolf Hitler and his schemers for conquest have counted heavily on this ify trait in human nature. They have played a hunch that if they kept moving, their intended victims always would be one jump behind. Their hunch was right. Everything has gone like clockwork.

The Germans have held the initiative. Their victims have done all the second guessing. It began to look as though it would stay that way indefinitely. Then the war with Russia began, and it looked as though Germany might have bitten off more than it could chew.

Promptly, the game of iffy began all over again. If the same thing happened to Hitler that happened to Napoleon... if the Russians held out till cold weather... if the game didn't prove worth the candle... a whole galaxy of some of the brightest ifs ever produced out of wishful thinking.

It seems not to have occurred to the iffers that they are playing Germany's game again. They are hoping for the best and trying not to imagine the worst. They are undermining themselves mentally for another shock like the shocks that came after Munich and the collapse of France, when they realized suddenly that Germany had diverted their attention from the main issue of the war by putting on a sideshow.

The main issue of the war is whether the Nazi regime of Germany shall have the privilege of inflicting its policies on any part of the world that does not want them. That issue is not going to be decided by the outcome of war in Russia, but by the ultimate outcome of the struggle between Germany's masters and governments that deny the credo of personal dictatorship and statism.

Wishful iffy offers nothing to the United States and Great Britain but new disappointments. Their work has been cut out for them and must be done with ever-increasing vigor, regardless of the hope that Russia somehow may be able to do the job for them.

STARS AND STRIPES ON ICELAND

Fifteen degrees of longitude lie between Iceland and the meridian of Greenwich. By occupying the island, the United States has established a naval outpost as far east as Dakar in Africa. From Iceland to Scotland is about the same as the distance from New York to Newfoundland. Hemisphere defense has become openly what it always has been in fact, defense of hemisphere approaches.

Together with the British Isles and Greenland, Iceland forms a chain of strategic island bases controlling the security of North America. In itself, it is a vitally important base either for naval operations against the British Isles or for their defense. In the battle of the Atlantic, Great Britain and the United States have had a joint interest in keeping Iceland out of unfriendly hands. It is particularly important in the problem of getting ships safely through the German blockade, because it commands the northern route where, submarine raiding being most difficult, there is heavy wartime traffic.

These are points to remember in the forthcoming armchair discussion of the government's announcement that Iceland henceforth will be used by the U. S. navy and guarded by U. S. troops as part of a plan to "insure the safety of communications..." on the seas and all... strategic outposts." It is not difficult to imagine the cry of anguish that would have risen if instead of Iceland being made safe for the United States, Americans had been told that it was being made safe for Germany. As for those who will mutter that this government has no right to walk in on another government's property, they should bear in mind that the United States has promised to withdraw immediately upon termination of the present emergency. That does not sound much like aggression.

NO. 1 BACKSEATER

Conservation, which never has been one of the nation's strong points, now is official policy. This is all to the good. It has produced already, among other benefits, a character role for the secretary of the interior, Mr. Ickes.

As conservator of petroleum resources, he is telling motorists, starting with his neighbors in Washington for a warmup, how to operate their vehicles more economically. They must take it easy when pulling away from intersections. They must not race their engines. They must drive with care and consideration.

This is an interesting outburst of the great American inhibition. Already, a lot of good advice is being added to Mr. Ickes' good advice, and more will be forthcoming. There is room for improvement in the operation of automobiles, make no mistake about it.

The trouble up to now has been that backseat drivers weren't official. They had no public recognition. That weakness has been overcome. As No. 1 Backseater, Mr. Ickes is personally qualified to give them the kind of leadership they have lacked up to the present.

THE STARS SAY:

For Thursday, July 10

JUDGING by the lunar and mutual aspects of major planets this should be a day of excellent opportunity for advancing upon high goals, and with much audacity and bold initiative. While it is propitious for launching new and very ambitious projects, with determination and aggression, yet it would be well to keep to tried and practical methods lest too radical change might challenge unwelcome publicity. Friendships, in both business and romantic aspect, may play a major part in attaining pleasant and profitable climax, but beware extravagance and over-indulgent ways. Courtship and marriage, festivity and popularity are probable.

Those whose birthday it is may find good fortune and exceptional opportunity knocking at the door, with insistence and determination. There should be unusual openings for putting over major projects as well as launching all sorts of objectives and ambitions, leading to high goals of heart's desire. The romantic as well as financial prospects may be splendidly stimulated for success and satisfaction; in all contacts friendship, affection and social festivity play major roles. Martial felicity is shown, but shun jealousy and "competition"; also publicity of an unwelcome complexion. Lavish outlay and excess might prove disturbing.

A child born on this day should have great energy and initiative, with exalted aims and ambitions. It should make outstanding success in life but early direction in thrift and financial responsibility would be helpful.

"TASK" MISSION IN ICELAND

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Iceland, the nation's newest defense outpost, appeared likely today to claim one of the largest United States garrisons overseas—if not the largest.

Latest army figures fix the total of present overseas garrisons at 118,700 troops. The disposition of these forces was not revealed, but Hawaii, presumably the most strongly manned post, had 40,000 soldiers in May for maneuvers.

Official information on the size of the British force now occupying Iceland comes under the head of a military secret, but seamen who touched recently at the island estimated it at about 80,000 men.

Informed opinion was that the American garrison would be at least equal to the strength of the British force it will eventually relieve.

There were indications that the vanguard of the occupying force—the naval forces whose landing Mr. Roosevelt announced yesterday—was of considerable strength. Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada said last night that the naval forces in Iceland were very large, permitting the withdrawal to England of Canadian reinforcements which had been on duty on the island for some time.

The composition of the landing force was unknown, but the general assumption here was that U. S. marines formed the bulk of it. However, President Roosevelt, in his exchange of communications with Prime Minister Hermann Jonasson of Iceland, spoke of sending "troops"—language which some interpreted as meaning that army units would prove the eventual garrison—or most of it.

In this connection, it was recalled that General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, disclosed on June 23 that a special force of soldiers and marines had been created for "task" missions—special operations of a specific nature outside of the continental United States. He said a marine officer had been given command of this unit, but did not indicate its strength or the officer's name.

Yesterday I discussed the new ideas of modern dentistry on the care of the temporary teeth. It is known now that they should be watched and cared for as regularly as the permanent teeth because the health and proper position in the mouth of the permanent teeth may depend on the health and eruption of the temporary teeth.

Dr. Clendingning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

"They are only baby teeth—don't bother with them"—this is a saying that should be outmoded and discarded.

But by all odds the most important tooth of childhood is the one that comes in during about the fifth or sixth year.

The sixth year tooth is not a baby tooth but the first permanent tooth!

And therein lies its importance. It is usually regarded as a temporary tooth, by the parents. And if it begins to show decay, it all too often is neglected on those grounds. The decay is allowed to go on, the tooth is lost and the whole firmness of the arch of the mouth is lost forever, leading to a weak adult arch and the subsequent sacrifice of many teeth that would not have needed to be sacrificed if this precaution had been observed.

The temporary teeth are twenty in number. If you divide each upper and lower jaw into halves, there are five milk teeth in each half of each upper and lower jaw. The first to come in are the central incisors, upper and lower, two in each jaw, then beside them, the lateral incisors, then a space is skipped and the first molars come in, then the cuspids between the lateral incisors and the first molars, then the second molars.

The time table is:
Central incisors between 5th and 8th months.
Lateral incisors between 7th and 10th months.
First molars between 12th and 16th months.
Cuspids between 14th and 20th months.

Tax Commissions Held Up

COLUMBUS, July 9.—Payment of $85,000 in commissions to 272 Ohio sales tax stamp agents was delayed further today to give Edwin Knachel of Cleveland time to carry his taxpayers suit to the court of appeals. Common Pleas Judge Robert P. Duncan continued a restraining order obtained by Knachel, who contends the state can not legally appoint agents to distribute sales tax stamps and pay them a commission.

Warns Liquor Dealers

COLUMBUS, July 9.—Liquor permit holders can have their permits suspended if they fail to pay into the state unemployment insurance fund, Atty Gen. Thomas J. Herbert advised the State Liquor Control board.

Parents should keep a time table of the temporary teeth where they can refer to it. Count the teeth from the middle. The sixth that comes in is the first permanent tooth. For heaven's sake, take care of that tooth.

It is especially soft and liable to decay. If any decay starts, have it treated immediately. To lose that tooth in upper or lower jaw may be to wreck a mouth for life.

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER THIRTY

The stage was set for tragedy—when would the curtain rise? North felt ten years older by the time the S. C. 322 had cleared the channel.

"And now where?" Long demanded. "How far out do you think we'd better go?"

"You know the apparatus better than I do," North replied, "so I'll leave the choice of position to you."

Once the breakwater lights were astern, the sub-chaser's crew awoke to sudden energy. Groups of white-clad seamen hurried back and forth on the after deck, one squad much occupied with certain round objects heretofore jashed in special racks.

"With we didn't have those Japs aboard," North overheard a nervous young ensign mutter to a fellow single-tripper. "I'm going to watch out—they're liable to pull something fast and give the whole show away."

Just then all lights on the S. C. 322 went out, and her Diesels ceased panting. Deathly stillness descended on the long gray-painted craft.

A breathless, petty officer, ghostly in the starlight, appeared on the bridge and saluted the commander.

"Hydrophones in order, sir."

"Very well. Tell Lieutenant Newcomb we'll be below directly."

In a tiny cabin six men, two of them in civilian clothes, stood in various attitudes of expectancy, bent over an alert young man in a frankly dingy shirt.

Lieutenant Newcomb was sitting at a crowded table fitted with a bewildering assortment of lights and dials. Just in front of the operator was fixed to a vertical shaft that vanished into floor planks, a contrivance not unlike the handlebars of a bicycle.

"This hydrophone," Long explained briefly, "is designed for listening to subsea noises. For instance, Lieutenant Newcomb can tell us what type a ship is even when she is passing ten miles away and how fast and in what direction she's traveling."

Like bronze images, the two Japanese stood watching with fearful intensity. Both seemed very nervous.

If Hugh North could have eliminated three hours from his entire life he would gladly have done without those three which ensued.

Once Lieutenant Newcomb raised a warning hand to report a freighter of some five thousand tons, limping along at nine knots on a south-westerly course.

"I think we've made a mistake," Commander Long bitterly commented after another hour had dragged by on leaden feet. "I'm afraid somebody has misled you, Captain."

North made no reply, for his eyes were intent on Lieutenant Newcomb as he hitched forward a little on his seat remarking, "I hear something—can't get it very clear yet. Hold on!"

Newcomb narrowed his eyes and made some delicate adjustments in the finder bar.

Above him bent North, breathless with anxiety, watching the color begin to creep into the tensed operator's features.

"Still don't get it really clear, sir," Newcomb replied to Commander Long's pantomimed query. "It's either.... Just a minute. I can tell you more. Um — what's this?"

He hurriedly adjusted a dial to his right, then manipulated the finder bar very gently.

"That couldn't be one of our subs coming in, could it?"

"Why?"

"Sounds like one had submerged 'way off to port.'"

"No, it's none of ours," snapped Commander Long, his cold blue eyes beginning to glitter. "Admiral Blackburn issued strict orders."

Silence, pregnant with terrific possibilities, ruled in that smoky hutch.

"You think," Kanamura demanded haltingly — "you think this is really a submarine?"

"Quiet!" barked the operator. "We'd better go on deck," the hawk-faced American commander remarked. "Come, gentlemen!"

Back on the bridge, North strained his eyes over the starlit expanse of sea stretching off to starboard. Commander Long took the wheel himself and rang for half speed.

Breathless, North watched the two Japanese who, talking in undertones, were now standing at the end of the tiny bridge, studying the dim horizon.

After the S. C. 322 had proceeded a quarter of a mile, Commander Long rang off the engines. Again the halting and listening operation was repeated. North realized he was experiencing anew the sensations he had felt one time when he had watched a famous surgeon performing a very delicate and intricate operation.

At last Commander Long beckoned and muttered hoarsely: "We're getting very close, we're behind them now; so keep an eye on those Japs—don't let 'em off the bridge!"

North said he would see to that. "What comes next?" he asked.

"As soon as we're sure we're running on the same course, I'll have the marine telegraph order them to surface at once."

"And if they won't?"

"If they don't," tersely replied Commander Long, "we have ways of persuading them."

When the sub-chaser's exhausts were once more stilled, North, by listening intently, distinguished a faint series of bell-like sounds, apparently rising from the water itself.

Was this the true I-14 below them, he asked himself, or was it a false one? Was it indeed that messenger of death sent by the villainy of Von Rentner and company? Could this stealthy craft be a thirteenth Japanese submarine? Commander Long stood with a set of earphones adjusted to his head. In answer to North's curt query, he frowned.

"Looks bad. We've repeated the order to 'halt and surface' three times. You've seen no signs of a sub, have you?"

"None. And the sea's as flat as a plate."

Commander Long suddenly snatched off the earphones and stepped to the speaking tube. "Ahoy, below there! Increase speed, keep right on for the harbor!"

Then indeed the S. C. 322 awoke to action. Lights went on, a searchlight blazed, and those seamen on the sub-chaser's stern rolled to its lip a large, gray object which much resembled a big ascan in size and shape.

North's finger joints cracked as he gripped the rail of the tiny bridge. Faster and faster throbbed the screws, and now Commander Long gave a brief, shrill blast on the whistle. Instantly those wraith-like shapes on the stern let their curious missile fall overboard. When it struck the sea with a wide silvery spash, the S. C. 322 bounded ahead like a spurred hunter.

Two hundred yards away the stopped as in her wake a marine volcano seemed to erupt. High into the air shot a vast fan of tortured water, and the sub-chaser reeled from the detonation.

"Man the forward gun! Sweep the sea with that light, Jennings!" snapped Commander Long. "If she surfaces," he flung at North, "we'd better be ready for her. That sub class carries a 4.7 rifle on her bow."

A whistling at the speaking tube called for attention.

"They've stopped, sir! Maybe they're going to surface."

"Fwe-e-e!" screamed the speaking tube.

"No, they've started again!"

Twice more that deadly dropping of depth bombs was repeated. North realized that in the now not very distant harbor of Honolulu, the great steel juggernauts were coming to life. One by one searchlights began to rake the sky, and somewhere on shore the notes of a bugle sounded a breathless call.

After the fourth depth charge had been dropped, "Newcomb reports the sub hurt," Long told North, "but they're trying to make the harbor just the same. Look at that oil slick!"

Again the S. C. 322, almost at the mouth of the channel, dropped her fifth depth charge. Once more a great tower of water. Once more a soared skyward.

A white streak of phosphorus suddenly appeared to the left; and North shouted, "Look to port!" Instantly the gun crew went into feverish activity.

"Let 'em have it when their scope's well up," Long shouted.

"No, no," North desperately pleaded. "Don't! Don't! Firing might start a general action."

"Right! Number One, cease firing!" The commander yelled his countermand through cupped hands.

"Look, look!" The two Japanese were crying excitedly, for... missing the entrance of the channel.... the hunted submarine was rushing at the coral beds lining the right of the channel.

While water fell from her superstructure, more and more of the stranger's wetly smooth conning tower appeared, until North was able to read the "I-14" painted in glaring white just above the periscopes.

"Captain North!" Kanamura cried excitedly. "Waseda says this boat looks like a Kaigun boat; but she is not—she is...."

The Japanese agent's words were drowned out by a terrific clang. From a seething mass of foam, the submarine's bow appeared, then.... its plates buckling visibly.... it slid over the reefs until.... with a dreadful crunching sound.... the stranded monster came to a halt.

Grimly ready for further resistance, the sub-chaser's gun crew trained their piece on the I-14 at point-blank range.

Finnish Town in Flames After Red Bombing

—I. I. N. Radiophoto

Only partly on the road to recovery after the recent war with Russia, Finland today feels the terror of war again as the tiny Baltic nation fights on the side of the Germans against Russia. Soviet bombing planes again are attacking Finnish towns. Berlin issued this picture, a radiophoto, showing the Finnish town of Turku in flames.

Bruce Kilgour looked thoughtfully into a tall glass; then raised it towards that copper-red sliver of the sun which was appearing above the Koolau range.

"Well, Hugh, old lad, here's to your greatest victory!" He grinned as he drew closer. "Odd but right now I recall the words of a certain gambler—a countryman of yours, by the way—and I think they're particularly apt at this moment."

North, apparently absorbed with the sunrise, made no comment.

"Said he, 'Kilgour, there ain't half so much in winnin' with a good hand as in playin' a poor hand well.'"

On the parapet of Fort Armstrong the two stood in solitary relief after the bustle attendant upon the arrest of Captain Karen and his polyglot crew of Russians, Germans, and Koreans — those "queer Japanese" of Pablo Gonzales, the little fisherman.

"Yes," Kilgour went on, "with all the proof your people found aboard that wretched sub, this war scare will end."

When Hugh North still said nothing, Kilgour peered curiously at his tall friend.

"Good Lord, old chap, wake up! Smile! Don't you realize you've pulled off the most amazing intelligence coup since the war?"

"That's what you think," muttered Captain North, his face grimmer than ever, as he turned back to Kilgour, the vision of the enchanting Nadia Stefan.... vanishing.... for the time.... from before his eyes.

Theatre Attractions

A new Marx brothers comedy, "The Big Store", will be seen at the State Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Virginia Grey, Margaret Dumont, Tony Martin, Douglas Dumbrille, Henry Armetta, Russell Hicks, and the three Marxes are in the cast.

The plot, as always in a Marx brothers film, is negligible, serving only as an introduction for the brothers' special brand of comedy. In this story, they are private detectives using their wiles to protect Tony Martin, department store owner, from being murdered. Their antics succeed finally after Martin has discovered the would be murderer himself.

Concluding tonight at the State is "Affectionately Yours", featuring Dennis Morgan, Merle Oberon and Rita Hayworth, with Ralph Bellamy, George Tobias and James Gleason.

Showing at the Grand on a double feature program tonight only are "Redhead", featuring June Lang, Johnny Downs, Eric Blore, Weldon Heyburn and Anna Chandler; and "The Big Boss", with Otto Kruger, Gloria Dickson and John Littel.

U. S. Spurs Airplane Output With No Loss In Equipment

BY DEVON FRANCIS
SEATTLE, July 9.—(The Special News Service)—Unlike the Germans, the United States is aiming for mass-scale production of military airplanes without any sacrifice of intricate mechanisms which insure high-grade performance.

Studies of German military airplanes show they are being made with the utmost simplicity of design. That permits their fabrication by semi-skilled or even unskilled workmen. The goal is volume production.

German air force commanders use aircraft as commanders of ground arms use infantry. The men and the equipment are expendable, as they were in Crete, if the objective is worth the loss.

I have been told that German airplanes were so simple that any backyard mechanic could take them apart and put them together again by following the instructions painted on engines, bodies and wires. Some British officers examining a captured German plane, were puzzled by foot high letters and numerals on the side of the fuselage until it suddenly dawned on them that the markings were merely to indicate what kind of gasoline the machine used.

American military planes are a contrast. They are complex mechanisms, and the manufacturing of them in the last decade has become a fine art. Engines are sturdy but intricate. Miles of "plumbing" having to do with operation and performance, snake through the structure of a bomber. No half-trained pilot can fly an American fighter.

Our design engineers and the armed services have refused to compromise on the intricacy of the airplanes being poured forth to buttress the air rearmament program and to supply Great Britain under the lease-lend act because, they argue, air fighting and bombing are becoming more complicated every day.

The size of airplanes, the speed at which they operate, and the altitude at which combat or bombing occur are all going up.

The goal of this country is to retain the essential features of a complicated mechanism without sacrificing speed of production. It is installing in big factories like Boeing's Seattle plant machines designed to simplify the job of the individual workman and increase his output.

An example: Every aircraft engine is housed in a stainless steel cowling, a barrel-like contrivance to reduce the engine's resistance to the air. It used to require 30 minutes to form such a cowling with a standard drop-hammer operation and that was followed by a considerable amount of hammering-out by hand.

Today, finished cowlings are being turned out by a single machine called a "triple-action press" at the rate of 240 an hour.

Boeing's new factory bears testimony to the thoroughness with which engineers, in cooperation with the armed services, have planned to speed production to fulfill the 12,000 bomber program.

Shifts of workmen going to and from their posts in the factory use tunnels under the main floor. That prevents congestion and interruption of tasks.

The Boeing plant, like the other aircraft factories, has taken a chapter from the book of automobile manufacturing. Far in the interior of the main building the primary fabrication of parts is started. A control surface is put together here, and a rib which helps shape a wing, there.

The smaller parts are put together to make "sub-assemblies" as SOHIO announces a new treatment that gets glass really clean, ends windshield blurr!

And it's as simple as . . .

KEEPS WHITE HOUSES WHITER

Painters, home owners praise this new Du Pont House Paint

It's the whitest white you ever saw! Tough and durable, Du Pont House Paint keeps houses beautiful because it stays cleaner! Here's why:—

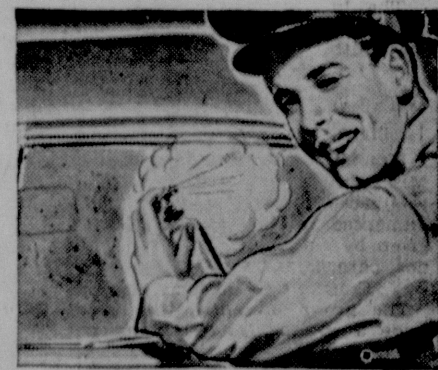

Du Pont Prepared Paint forms a tough, durable film which protects the surface from rust, rot or decay. Like all paints, it collects dirt on exposure to the elements. As time goes on, however, a fine white powder forms on the surface of this new paint. This powder is washed away by heavy rains, carrying the dirt with it, and exposing a fresh white surface. This "self-cleaning" process starts after a few months of exposure under normal conditions of weather, but may be delayed under unusual climatic or dirt-collecting conditions. Because the "self-cleaning" process is gradual, the wearing qualities of the paint film are not abnormally affected.

Its economy lies in the fact that it stretches the time between paintings. Remember — Du Pont House Paint costs no more $2.95 than other good paints. Ask your painting contractor for Du Pont in tractor to use it! 5 Gal. Lots.

DEFER SEVEN 'OLD' DRAFT PROSPECTS

The Salem draft board is granting indefinite postponement to men on its roster who are 28 years of age and older.

The names of seven men who otherwise would have been summoned for military training in the near future were "skipped" today when the draft board summoned 19 youths for a tentative July 31 call. The board's action is in line with the recent government order deferring the older draftees.

The draft board at Lisbon this morning granted indefinite postponement to 17 of the 28-year-olds who were slated for army service.

IT IS SAID constipation causes many human discomforts—headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness being but a few. BUT DON'T WORRY—

For years a noted Ohio Doctor, Dr. F. M. Edwards, successfully treated scores of patients for constipation with his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now sold by druggists everywhere.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only gently yet thoroughly cleanse the bowels but ALSO assist liver bile flow to help digest fatty foods. Test their goodness TONIGHT without fail! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

Gets 25 Lima Tank Cars

LINDEN, N. J., July 9—The arrival of 25 tank cars from Lima today will round out a two-phase program by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey to deliver overland a maximum of crude oil to its refineries in New Jersey. Pipelines connecting the Bayway refinery here with the middle west are delivering 1,000,000 gallons a day, a company spokesman said. The Lima shipment, first rail consignment to the east from that pipeline terminus, will add 210,000 gallons to the supply.
